ABOUT THIS REPORT

In December 2019, FAME Foundation started the PLAY it DREAM it (PiDi) Initiative. The aim of the PLAY it DREAM it is to use sports as a tool to advocate for the Sustainable Development Goals 3, 4, 5, 6, and 10. The project was conceived by our Executive Director, Aderonke Bello, at the 2019 Global Sports Mentoring Programme by the U.S Department of States.

A lot has been achieved since then. The project had impacted about 12,850 persons, including over 1000 Internally Displaced Girls from IDP Camps within the Federal Capital Territory, Abuja. We have organized advocacy campaigns, monthly sports boot camp, an all-women football tournament with the grant, and in-kind support from partners and supporters. We have also provided direct support to victims of Gender-Based Violence during the Covid-19 lockdown.

In this report, we share our progress, learning, and insights from December 2019 to date. PLAY it DREAM it report shares what we have achieved, as well as the future. We recommend that you refer to the PLAY it DREAM it page on our official website, www.famefoundationwg.org if you are interested in the detail behind what the project is about, and what we set out to achieve, as well as the process we took.

THE BIG IDEA

Nearly 2 out of 3 of the country's 10.19 million out-of-school children in Nigeria are girls. The education deprivation for girls, especially in Northern Nigeria, is driven by various factors, including economic barriers and socio-cultural norms and practices that discourage formal education.

Coupled with socio-cultural norms and economic barriers, the lack of educational opportunities is often a heavy contributor to child marriage. Girls' education is one of the best strategies to protect girls from early marriages. On average, the likelihood of a girl marrying as a child is six percentage points less for every additional year she stays in secondary education. This practice deeply affects child brides, their children, families, and even countries.

The need to address the lack of quality education and the rising occurrence of early marriages, especially for displaced girls due to the Boko Haram terrorism in Northern Nigeria and the poor economic situations of displaced families, was the big idea for PLAY it DREAM it.

Subsequently, the idea has evolved into using sports as a platform for gender equality, peace-building, movement building, and promoting climate change action.

Through her GSMP experience, Aderonke developed skills needed to expand FAME Foundation, including new ways to gain public support, best practices for curriculum delivery and methodology, and ways to include technology into programs using sports for women and girls empowerment.

ABOUT
PLAY it DREAM it

ABOUT PLAY IT DREAM IT

The PLAY it DREAM it Initiative was conceived at the 2019 GSMP cohort by Aderonke Ogunleye-Bello, Executive Director, FAME Foundation. Following that was its first implementation phase with 65 female orphans from several orphanage homes as its first set of beneficiaries.

The initiative is aimed at using sports as a tool to educate the girl-child, reduce child marriage and increase the participation of females in sports while improving their overall well-being and health, in line with SDGs 3, 4, 5, 6 and 10.

The curriculum-based sports initiative has directly impacted 12,724 girls and over 22,850 indirect beneficiaries, from Internally Displaced Camps, Orphanage homes and underprivileged communities in Nigeria.

We undertook this project for two reasons:

1. We believe that sport is a unifying factor, especially in a heterogeneous country like Nigeria, comprising different ethnic groups, religions, languages, values, etc. Sport is what brings us together regardless of our differences.
2. We also believe that the power of sports cuts across different spheres of society, hence can be used to cause societal development and growth, especially in area of gender equality, peace-building and women's empowerment.

BABY STEPS TO IMPACT

PLAY it DREAM it officially commenced on December 8, 2019, at the City Park Abuja with a football match between four teams from different orphanage homes within the FCT during Christmas party organized for orphans.

CROSS-CUTTING LEARNING AND INSIGHTS

CROSS-CUTTING LEARNING AND INSIGHTS

Throughout the design, planning, and implementation of the impacts we delivered, we have discovered some insights which have further affirmed those we knew. Below are some of the insights we hope any organization using sports for good will find valuable.

Power of Sports

It is undeniable that sport is a powerful tool for development and change, but it has to be properly implemented for its power to be harnessed. Seeing the power of sports in causing sustainable changes in our society, more funds and resources need to be channeled to sports organizations.

Failure is part of the journey

Mistakes were made on the way but being open to failing and seeing it as an opportunity to be better was important in our PLAY it DREAM it journey.

Together we achieve more

The involvement of all stakeholders, especially the beneficiaries of the project in our implementation process contributed to our success story. Understanding their needs and effectively communicating with them was an important matrix in the success equation.

Covid-19 and Sports Future

Covid-19 had revealed the need for sports organizations to be diverse and creative. Preparations have to always be put in place, in case of unforeseen circumstances.

Collaboration

There is a need for stronger collaboration between sports organizations at different levels. It was always a valuable opportunity to learn from experts and also share insights with others. The collaboration provided the opportunity for each stakeholder to bring their strengths to the table.

Maximizing Resources

There is a need for organizations to effectively utilize resources, and also look out for cost-effective ways to achieve better results.

HIKING AGAINST RAPE

Hiking Against Rape was organised on July 4, 2022, under the PLAY it DREAM it Initiative, using sports as a tool for making positive changes in the society. It was aimed at campaigning against rape incidents that tripled in number since the COVID-19 lockdown.

‘Hiking Against Rape’ advocated against rape, educated hikers on their individual responsibilities towards reducing rape, and raised funds for rape victims to help them get access to psychological counselling, and medical and financial assistance, to reduce any and every after-rape effect.

WHAT WE DELIVERED

PLAY it DREAM it was created to solely use sports as a tool to advocate for the Sustainable Development Goals, with focus on gender equality. In this section, we recap on what we delivered and to whom. To see more detail, please refer to www.famefoundationwg.org.

CAMPAIGN AGAINST RAPE

FAME Foundation organized series of outdoor exercises tagged, 'Hiking Against Rape' and also 'Yoga Against Rape', to campaign against Gender-Based Violence, especially the rape pandemic which tripled in number since COVID-19 lockdown.

These activities were under the PLAY it DREAM it project, and it was aimed at using sports to drive a cause with the hope of creating sustainable changes in society. The objective of the activities was to create more awareness on the issue of rape and advocate against it. It also was an avenue to educate participants on their social responsibilities and possible strategies to curb the occurrence of rape, through talk sessions and interactions.

IMPACTS

Through the campaigns organized, I have being able to share my stories with other rape survivors. Doing this kick started my healing process from trauma and anger.

TAMARA EBIWEI

“

As a 16 year old survivor of rape and also a mother, I have gotten assistance, both in kind and cash, through this campaign.

ANONYMOUS

“

Learning about how to stand against rape culture as a boy and supporting survivors, are few of the things I learnt from the campaign.

DAMILOLA AYOMIDE

Being part of this campaign and also raising my voice against GBV was an amazing experience. The use of sporting activities to campaign against rape is indeed a great idea.

The key is to realize that there is no such thing as "sport values". Sport is a great tool, but it's just a tool. If you do not work and reflect on how to inculcate values in sport games, the program loses its purpose and impact.

Sport is an excellent tool to empower girls because when girls play they become physically stronger, healthier and more aware of their bodies.

When girls play they develop their confidence, leadership and essential life skills, which can be transferred to other spheres of life, such as teamwork and resilience.

When playing, girls challenge socio-cultural norms and gender stereotypes. This empowers them and makes them stronger to do the same and fight for their rights in other areas of life.

The menace called nepotism and favoritism can only be curbed, if only we all can change our mindset by putting the country's sports first based on merit when selecting athletes.

The initiative, officially launched in 2019, works toward the actualization of SDGs 3, 4, 5, and 10.

ISA AWARD NOMINATION

FAME Foundation is thrilled to announce that we have been shortlisted for the International Sports Awards for a third time in a row, 2021, 2022 & 2023 under the category 'Diversity and Inclusion Award' for moving sports towards acceptance and diversification.

The project we put in for the award is the PLAY it DREAM it initiative. It is an initiative of FAME foundation using sports as a tool to educate the girl-child, reduce the occurrences of child-marriages and Increase the participation of females in sports while improving their overall health and well-being. The initiative, officially launched in 2019, works toward the actualization of SDGs 3, 4, 5, and 10.

The target persons were girls in vulnerable groups – IDPs and those in rural areas, who are prone to experience more dangers because of their lack of resources, in terms of basic living needs, education, and awareness. This project is using sporting activities to empower and mentor girls, as well as educate them on embodying male-centered roles such as sport, which, throughout the years has been seen as a 'boy' activity.

This curriculum-based initiative has mentored over 200 girls on the basic education they lacked due to poor living conditions and access to school education; this included leadership sessions, hygiene, self-awareness, life skills, empowerment skills, and psycho-social support. Over 10 girls have also been awarded scholarships to complete their basic education.

Through sporting activities and games, PLAY it DREAM it encourages girls' participation in sports, thus promoting gender equality and reduced inequalities by allowing girls in vulnerable groups to participate in sports. It sensitizes girls on the dangers surrounding child marriage, creating a safe space that acts as a form of engagement; advocates for the prioritization of girls' education and formulates policies that will help girls access quality education; formulate strategies that can be properly used to include girls' participation in sports; promotes a healthy lifestyle and mental well-being; creates a platform in sport for girls to develop self-confidence and self-worth, and overall empower them for a brighter future.

PLAY IT DREAM IT CAMPAIGN

PLAY it DREAM it campaign engaged top Nigeria football players drawn from the most senior female team (Super Falcons players) and male team (Super Eagles). Kelechi Iheanacho, Troost-Ekong, Ola Aina, Taiwo Awoniyi, Esther Okoronkwo, Rasheedat Ajibade, and others international players, participated in the campaign against girl-child marriage and advocacy for girl-child education.

The players expressed their displeasure for girl-child marriages and spoke-up for the education of every girl-child in Nigeria.

FUTURE ACTIONS

As our world is ever-changing, the need to find more effective and sustainable solutions to the world's ever-rising problem remains a constant factor.

With the availability of the Covid-19 vaccine, the world is gradually recovering from its loss, and sports activities are returning to normal.

Sports organizations have played impactful roles during the pandemic by developing creative ways to maintain the physical and mental well-being of individuals and much more.

As sports for good organizations, we need to more than ever nurture and support one another. Funding and resources should be made available to organizations making sustainable impacts. More support needs to be given to sport for good organizations focused on grassroots communities, seeing they face greater challenges and obstacles.

We at FAME Foundation will continue to develop better strategies and creative ways to use sports for greater impacts in the communities we work in. We are also looking at expanding our horizon by reaching out to more vulnerable communities outside our scope, but that we can only do with the availability of funds and resources at our disposal, and also the support we get.

The successful implementation of the first phase of the project attracted the interest of Agence Francaise de Developpement (AFD) into signing an agreement worth 20,000 Euros on July 14, 2021. The project commenced from December 1, 2021, to end December 1, 2022.

Laureus Sport for Good and FAME Foundation partnership will be reaching young children; boys and girls aged 7-17, through the several activities like Football for Development, and other sports, aiming at 200 displaced children that will participate in the project's weekly and monthly sporting activities and exercises, including mentorship and empowerment programmes.

The partnership between the French Embassy in Nigeria and FAME Foundation intends to inspire and educate vital life skills to young people, particularly those who are consistently underserved, excluded, or economically disadvantaged. Projects such as the National Breakdance Championship, the Para-soccer Inclusion Tournament, the Para Power Lifting Games, and other activities are being implemented.

We plan to expand PLAY it DREAM it beyond its current target audience and location, in the nearest future. This decision is fueled by our burning desire to impact more lives through the unifying power of sport.

We also plan to run a football academy for girls, especially those from under-served communities and also launch mini football pitches at various grassroots communities.

Until then, we hope this report shares how far we have gone, what we have achieved in our community, and how it has bettered us and prepared us ahead of the future.
